To foster change towards a sustainable future society, we need a creative mind set, the ability to think out of the box, mobilizing our phantasy potentials, and lead from theory to action. Art is a wonderful tool, that helps expressing our inner strength and potentials for finding new and better solutions to many of the big challenges today. With the burden of our history, we have no other choice than being a slave of our old cultural paradigms. But to move towards a sustainable world community we must reach out to new horizons. The problems are well known now, the analyses done. It is time to go from theory to action, testing our creativity in concrete action plans. The living experiment is the cradle of our change.

Our activities during this 1 week workshop is to raise awareness of the place, for the people living there, for the new education center, and of course for ourselves. With artistic interventions we want to change places in our village, create attention and curiosity for something new, redesign old structures, and test our own capabilities.
